

Perfumes and the Women Who Love Them

It is Valentine's day, then many men turn to flowers or candy to show the women in their lives just how much they really care. For the bigger holidays such as birthdays or perhaps Yuletide, men typically reach a bit deeper into their pockets for that larger ticket products such as jewelry or perfume. But the reason why so much perfume is sold in any given year has far more to do with hormones and the feelings developed by certain scents than from the gift-giving reason of men.

Perfumes, colognes, and scented natural skin oils have been part of human civilization since the time of the ancient Egyptians and beyond. Jars and vases filled up with exotic fragrances have also been found in ancient Chinese burial sites. In fact, the use of perfumes does not have any exact starting date as its exact historical past is unknown. All that is truly known is the fact that people have been using cologne and perfume to enhance their own scent for thousands of years will continue to do so for the foreseeable future.

Any given year, 66% of men and also 75% of women end up buying cologne or perfume during the course of a year. Researchers believe that a part of the reason why women love receiving perfume (and also when men love giving perfume as a gift) is due to pheromones. Pheromones are hormones thought to stimulate sexual appetite or attention and they are triggered by scent.

So carry out women love perfume because it makes them want to have sex? No, actually the scent has a more dramatic effect after men. While the effect will be less obvious in women, certain aftershaves worn by men have been known to produce an identical desire in women. Although a link between the scent of perfume and increased sexual desire has been found, researchers do not believe that it clarifies the desire to wear perfume on a daily basis.

Fact, most experts believe that human pheromones and their impact upon our behavior has decreased over the years as we have become more advanced and civilized. While most scientists determine that scent once performed a rather large part in human mating habits, they believe that it has relatively little to do with lovemaking attraction in this day and age.

- So next...why do women love perfume so much and why is that such a popular reward during the holidays?
- It actually seems to be due to the simple feeling developed by wearing any fragrance that one finds appealing.
- In fact, the feeling created by a woman wearing perfume is similar to that produced by a candle used for aromatherapy.
- It is soothing, delicate, and slightly romantic but probably not sexual in nature.

Of Course, It Does Not Really Matter Why Precisely a Woman Loves Wearing Perfume

Everything is truly important is that she does love to smell excellent and the attention she receives when wearing the woman's favorite perfume. In time, the scent and the scent of her own body will combine right into a singular aroma which will literally become her own scent.

Interesting Information about The Use Of Human Pheromones human pheromones are chemicals in the body that are secreted in order to attract members of the opposite sex. Much research has been done in to the use of pheromones inside different aspects, such as perfumes, in order to ease the process of finding...

As the sense of smell could recollect probably the most vivid of memories, it is this excellent scent of a woman combined with her perfume that people tend to remember most when thinking about that person. Men will often buy the same perfume for a woman actually years after she has ceased using it because it is the scent they have come to identify with that woman.

And yet, females do move on to new perfumes and always seem to be on the search for a new scent to embellish their bodies. Of course, it is not surprising for some higher end perfumes to cost $100's of dollars per bottle which is why a large number of women and men end up buying their favorite brands online. The internet can also be a great place to find deals on new perfumes and fragrances as most websites generally offer a much greater selection than conventional retailers.

- The love of fragrance by both men and women may be completely instinctual and somehow related to sexuality.
- However, the fact is that perfume just plain smells great and so puts us in a good mood.
- Who doesn't like something that smells good--be this a pot roast or a garden lily?
- Of course, pot roast has a tendency to make us hungry...so what does the actual smell of fine perfume help to make us?
- There has to be a very good reason the reason why perfume will be very popular, now does not there
