

Pheromones and Hormones - Are they The Same?

Pheromones are often confused with hormones, although they are not the same thing. They are secretions of scent that mammals give off when they are excited, afraid or attracted to something. There are many different pheromones that people radiate, depending on the situation. You have probably heard that dogs and other animals could odor concern on a human. Humans give off when they are afraid of something that other animals with a keen sense of smell can detect.

- One emotion that causes pheromones to improve in levels will be sexual attraction.
- This is true for both men and women.
- Other people can pick up on this scent, although they may not be sure why.
- It is a natural body reaction in which human beings have when they are attracted to someone else and want intimacy.
- It is not apparent, however those around will notice this scent and react.
- Pheromones for attraction often cause a strong response from others.

Way to Use It to Enable You to Attract Someone is to Use It in Colognes or Perfumes

There are numerous perfumes and fragrances that use it as part of the scent. By design, perfumes and colognes use pheromones as a way to attract others by scent. Scents are often incorporated together with human pheromones to create a feeling. Most are used in perfumes and colognes are synthetic. There are several perfumes and colognes, however, that use genuine human pheromones to create a sensation. They have proven to work very well when it comes to bringing in others.

Pheromone Chemistry Sets Making your own pheromones is definitely something that should not be taken on by a newbie. However, with a fair amount of research blending together your pheromones is quite possible. Better yet, there is a significant cost-savings if you are...*

Perfumes and Colognes are Made to Draw People as It is

We spray them on to hope that someone will be attracted to the aroma. The perfume scent combines with our own body and gives off a particular scent. This is the reason no perfume or cologne smells exactly the same on any kind of two men or women. But when you use pheromones in perfume or cologne, you are getting an extra edge. You are saying that you are available and sending out a signal to others who are also available and which may then be attracted to a person.

No One Knows Exactly Why Some People are Attracted to Others

Looks are not the number one thing that attracts people to one another, even though it does break the ice. Many people, at a loss for what it is that these people like about someone different will cite personality, although this is not true, either.
