Many years ago I owned a list establishment on an Army installation in Georgia. One year many of the troops there had been deployed to Egypt for an extended training exercise. When they returned many of them had been asking me for a fragrance called Secret of the Desert. Their claim was that when they employed this scent it actually caused women to become sensitive to be able to sexual intercourse. There were so many who claimed that they had used this fragrance and that it had actually worked for them that I established that it was worth checking out.

When I do some research I discovered this fragrance listed as one of the scented oil perfumes sold by Egyptian vendors. The actual fragrance that has been known as Secret of the Desert was none other than their particular version of Chanel #5. The hype was created by the vendors in order to make a lot more sales to the gullible soldiers and the Egyptians used sex as a selling device. In light of this I would advise you in order to be wary of any scented product which promises that it will cause the opposite sex to be attracted to a person. Scent Essential oil Express.
